

The Value Braid

The ins and outs of the produce business

Hans Maurer

Prestoungrange University Press

Contents

1 Introduction	xiii
2 For starters	1
- Produce or horticulture?
- Forget supply chains - value needs to be the name of the game
3 CON-Factor analysis	13
Consumer	15
Changes in my time – Perception – What do consumers care about? – Merchandising – The meaning of ‘fresh’ – Supermarkets: trick or treat? – Shit happens – Time & knowledge
Constraint	39
The nature of the product – The way things used to be – Supply and demand – Supermarkets and greengrocers – The demands of one crop category vs. the needs of many – Packaging – The produce crate dilemma – One way packaging – Who pays the ferryman?
Conflict	61
Consumer vs. Retailer – Supermarket operations vs. merchandise – Marketing vs. the rest of the supermarket – Perishable merchandise vs. shelf stable – Supplier brands vs. private label – The grower/ wholesaler/ retailer relationship – How things changed – Logistics vs. merchandise – Want vs. availability

Contents continued

Consistency	89
In the field – The consumer – Freshness – The big void between field and shopping trolley – The business of consistency
Confidence	103
Technology – Economies of scale – Relationships – Brands – Marketplace confidence: the direct import game – Success
Control	121
Value chain elements that can be influenced – Production phase – Time of harvest – Harvesting method – Post-harvest handling and transport – The retailer is always right: bananas – Control: tactics or strategy? – Auction – Equilibrium gone: withdrawal from auction
4 Thought pieces	141
- Beyond fresh produce supply chain management - Some thoughts along the chain - Sustainability, carbon neutrality and all that jazz - Sustainability within the fresh produce context - Parallel universes and the fresh produce industry - Views on reusable plastic crates - Country of origin labelling & fresh produce CPR - A retailer’s summerfruit reflections - The great kiwifruit debate - New Zealand short story icon Frank Sargeson was actually a bit of a produce marketing expert as well

*Contents continued5 Opinions

207

- 5+ A Day on a Saturday?
- Compromise
- Instant accessibility – curse or opportunity?
- Coffee or peaches – the principle is the same
- Read the book
- Why produce managers need to think
- Industry matters
- Let's throw them to the lions
- Summerfruit – what is that again?
- Come fly with me...
- A basic focus for 2004
- What does it take to be a competent assistant produce manager?
- The power of a brand
- Retail is detail
- The customer is king
- Does it really matter which decade fresh food grocers live in?
- R2D2 is coming to an orchard near you – how long before it hits your store?
- The good old days
- Working on a chain gang
- The Easter Bunny & Father Christmas – the annual curse of the produce department
- Quality – is it all that it is cracked up to be?
- C.S.T.S.Y.B.
- A mango in my fruit bowl
- A message for store produce staff
- ANZAC Day reflections...
- Cheap pineapples - a comical tragedy in 3 scenes

Contents continued

- Culture - what culture?
- It's Thursday, it must be Finland
- Food for thought
- Fresh Duck &^%# !
- Quality at a low price - challenge or utopia?
- Brian Gargiulo - Vegfed's answer to Robespierre?
- The Fresh [Direct] approach
- SARS and the energy crisis - any impact on produce?
- Summerfruit, boatbuilders and the need for action
- Cause & consequence
- Do tomatoes fart?
- Local or imported, 'for sale' or merchandised?
- Leverage & standards
- Increasing produce sales and staying profitable
- Fresh produce marketing - the 'not so' basics
- How to...
- All that Timmy wants
- Opportunity lost
- Supermarkets - do they still work?
- Some simple maths on groceries and grapes
- Competence, capacity & consistency
- In praise of maturity
- Of cabbages and kings...

6 CONvergence

327

The AgriChain Centre – Growers/ Importers/ Exporters/
Retailers – What makes convergence possible
– Convergence – The plate – Strategy – The bugger index
– Convergence at price level – We used to...